Hawaiian Gazette

EST MODUS IN REBUS.

10-PAGE EDITION.

TUESDAY, MARCH 17, 1891.

The mail received by the Alameda confirms the statement before published that Congress refused to pass the Cable bill. This is much to be regretted, though it may be presented to the next Congress in a modified form, giving to the United States and Hawaiian Governments an interest equal to any cash advanced by them to aid in its construction. If this new feature can be introduced, it will aid in securing the passage of the measure, as the principal objection raised by its opponents was that the Government received no compensation for the aid furnished by it.

The appropriation of $700,000 for improving the entrance to Pearl Harbor was adopted by Congress, and it is believed that work will be commenced as soon as arrangements for doing so can be completed. If the obstructions consist, as has been stated, chiefly of a layer or patches of coral resting on sand, the removal of the coral, by the improved methods now in use, ought not to be an insuperable task. The carrying out of this proposed work will make a wonderful change in the future of that beautiful lagoon.

JAPAN NEWS.

In the files of the Japan Daily Mail kindly supplied to the ADVERTISER by Capt. Young of the Yamashiro Maru there is much that is both instructive and interesting, particularly regarding the doings in the first session of the Japanese Parliament.

The Daily Mail prints in extenso a long letter addressed to the editor of the Daily Telegraph by Sir Edwin Arnold, whose prolonged residence in Japan has been brought to a close. Sir Edwin writing on the 29th of November last under the heading, "The First Asiatic Parliament," says: "I have just returned from witnessing the most interesting and important spectacle in the modern history of Japan. I have seen the birth of a new Parliament, the first assembly of the kind known to the continent of Asia, modelled upon European systems, traditions and precedents, and meeting for its very first visible embodiment with all constitutional forms and ceremonies, under the imperial patronage and presence of the Emperor, lately a Sovereign so removed from mortal sight and spheres as to be almost regarded as a deity, but to-day viewed discharging the duties of a constitutional monarch."

After describing at length the ceremonies of the occasion, the writer concludes: "A new Japan is definitely born—constitutional, progressive, energetic, resourceful, sure to become great, and, perhaps, almost again as happy as she was of yore. Let the nations of the West receive and welcome as she deserves this immeasurably ancient empire which thus renews her youth in the fountain of constitutional liberties and institutions."

Some amusing incidents occur occasionally in the Japanese House of Representatives as well as in older ones. A certain gentleman attended the House in what appears to have been an uncertain style of dress, for a member rose to inquire in what capacity the gentleman appeared in the House, as a member had to appear either in Japanese dress or in foreign costume with a frock coat or a morning coat. The President said that Mr. — was in foreign costume, but the questioner insisted that it was not proper foreign costume, and the President was blamed for having shown amusement at a violation of the rules, so he requested the doubtfully-dressed gentleman to withdraw, which he did, returning shortly afterwards in a frock coat.

It appears too that the highly-civilized practice of "parliamentary obstruction" has reached the land of the Rising Sun, for their is occasional mention made of the application of the "closure" to bring to an end a debate which threatens to become interminable, but on all occasions the Representatives behave as gentlemen impressed with the importance of their functions. Once indeed we find the House "falling into more and more confusion. Members speaking without leave, others shuffling with their feet or hammering on their desks, and the President's cries for order disregarded. Soon afterwards the closure was put and voted, and the House proceeded to further business, and after all rose at 4:30 P. M."

The death on the 18th February of Prince Sanjo, Lord Keeper of the Privy Seal, seems to have been one of the most important recent events in Japan. The Prince was in his 54th year, and so was only 16 when Perry's squadron anchored off Uraga and young Sanjo by birth of the "Kuge" class, a son of a Minister of State, was a direct descendant of one of the former emperors. Young Sanjo and five friends made an attempt to overthrow the Tokugawa dynasty and restore the executive power to the Emperor being supported by the great feudal barons, and nobles of the Court. A change in the prospects of his party obliged Sanjo and his friends to take refuge in Chosin where they remained for three years until the accession of the present Emperor in 1866.

Since then the Prince has been always in the highest and most responsible positions, as Second Minister of State, First Minister, and Prime Minister. From the extreme anti foreign feeling of his early years he became noted for the thorough liberality of his policy in office. On the news of the Prince's critical condition being conveyed to His Majesty, the Emperor hastened to the bedside of his dying friend and with broken voice said, "In the early years of my reign, while I was yet a youth, you were my chief aid. It was you who, not shrinking from a post of weighty responsibility, lent me assistance so constant, so steady, and so true that you were to me as a teacher and a parent. Never from first to last did you falter or fail in the discharge of your large trust. Your services are a model for all subjects of our time. In recognition of your noble fidelity, I confer on you the First Class of the First Rank." The Prince unable to speak raised his head and joined his hands in token of recognition, and a few hours later breathed his last.

His remains were accorded the most magnificent public funeral ever seen in Japan.

ABOUT WINDMILLS!

The utility of Windmills on these Islands has never been clearly illustrated for the reason that until the introduction of the Aermotor by the HAWAIIAN HARDWARE COMPANY there was not a mill that would meet the requirements of the purchaser or that could be made to run in localities where the wind is, at times, so light that it is impossible to make the old style wooden wheel turn around. The Aermotor is constructed of steel so light, yet strong, that it moves with the slightest wind nor is it affected in any manner in the severest gale. It is an absolute fact that the ordinary wooden mill will remain motionless on account of scarcity of wind while at the same time the Aermotor will be pumping water.

During a recent visit to Maunaloa Ranch the wind was so light that it was not believed that any mill could run, a half dozen ordinary mills were motionless but the Aermotor was pumping water enough to supply the requirements of several hundred heads of stock. This is the usual state of affairs and is evidence enough to convince the most skeptical that the Aermotor is the greatest windmill on earth. An eight foot geared Aermotor will pump water, saw wood, turn the grindstones and grind the feed for the stock at the same time. It will, by its labor saving qualities, add twenty years of solid comfort to its owner's life, it will add to his bank account and do every thing but drive the hens to water or make them drink.

We now have these mills on each of the group and in every case they have proven a perfect success, in every instance they have done more than was expected and have, consequently, given the greatest satisfaction. We believe the sale of the Aermotor on these Islands will be enormous and that they will ultimately take the place of every other make.

It is said that the other mills do not require puffing to sell them but we observe that it takes a great many strong puffs of wind to make them go after they are sold. An occasional testimonial does no harm and we think they do some good, they show the state of the public pulse so far as windmills are concerned. The following are called from a thousand, not merely for what they express, for there are others louder in their praises but for the character of the people who furnish them.

Messrs Hawaiian Hardware, Co., Honolulu.

GENTLEMEN—I have had the 8 foot Aermotor placed in position on Maunaloa Ranch and desire to express to you the genuine satisfaction I feel at the work it has done. It runs smoothly and revolves in the slightest wind. One strong point in its favor, in addition to its doing all you promised it would do, is its absolute freedom from noise, a fault so common with every other mill I have ever seen.

Yours Truly,
GEORGE J. CAMPBELL, Manager.

The 12 foot geared Aermotor has been running my four-horse grinder, two-hole self-feed corn-sheller, feed cutter, etc. It produces more power than you claim for it, and I cheerfully recommend it to parties wanting a gear mill.

C. W. PHENIX,
Bradford, Ill.

I have had one of your 12 foot geared Aermotors in use for six months and it fulfills your recommendations in every respect. In a moderate wind it will furnish more power than four horses on a sweep power. It regulates perfectly. Gusts do not affect it. It does my feed cutting, grinding, and pumping to my entire satisfaction.

H. D. HOOVER,
Antioch, Ill.

I like the tower and Aermotor first rate and would not give it for any other that I know. I have one wooden wheel, the one I think it the best wooden mill there is but I would not give your wheel for a dozen of the wooden ones. The Aermotor runs when wooden wheels will not, and regulates better than any of them and does not jerk the pump.

J. R. KNOX,

My 8 foot Aermotor, which furnishes water for 200 head of stock, will pump in a wind that will not move other 10 to 14 foot wheels.

It cannot be compared with others in tight winds, while in strong winds it regulates itself much better and quicker than others; but one of its finest points to my mind is that it does not jar the pump at all.

ISAAC SCHULTZ,
Galt, Ill.

I built the tower myself, although I am no carpenter. The directions were so plain one could not make a mistake. All the mills owned by my neighbors have 12 foot wheels. Mine is 8 foot but it will pump with less wind than any one of them. It does not have to run more than two hours a day to pump water for 90 head of stock.

THOMAS G. STEPHENSON,
Reardon, Wash.

We use our 8 foot Aermotor for irrigating three acres of land, and find it equal to any 10 foot wooden wheel on the market. It runs nearly without wind, and works the pump smoothly and well.

HANSON & TEMPLE,
Archer, Neb.

These are but a few of many testimonials in our hands, we could publish more of them but printers ink is not given away in Hawaii.

We advertise the Aermotor now simply because it is a new thing here and we want to bring it before the public, it won't be long before the mills will advertise themselves.

We will be glad to furnish prices and more detailed particulars to parties who write us or, if persons interested in Aermotors will call at our store we will show them working models erected on tilting towers.

We have the sole agency for these Islands and the Aermotor can be obtained only through us.
